*You won't get to Berlin
in an Armchair!*

If Canada and the United Nations had depended upon "Armchair Soldiers" to fight this war, the Nazis and Japs would have grabbed this country long ago.

There is no "Royal Road" to Berlin. It's fighting all the way and Canada's Army needs every man it can get. That's why, today, you should volunteer for overseas service. You'll need months of intensive training to make you fighting-fit.

Don't be a stay-at-home and let the other fellow do it. Get into a man's uniform with the G.S. badge of honour on your sleeve. If we're going to win this war, we'll have to do more than just read about it in the papers.

So, come on you fellows, the good old army has got to finish the job!

The English Channel

A NARROW STRIP OF WATER which upon more than one occasion has changed the course of history, was a vitally important factor in the Allied invasion of Europe. The English Channel has been described as "an important body of water which joins the Atlantic Ocean with the North Sea, and separates France from England." Its entire area is about 21,000 square miles, and its width varies from twenty-one miles, at the Straits of Dover, to over one hundred miles at the Western end. Frequently disturbed by storms, its waters are said to be the most treacherous in the world. More favorable waters are usually experienced during the spring and summer months, and this was an important consideration in the selection of the now famous "D" Day. For some years consideration was given to a proposal for building a railway tunnel under the Channel between France and Britain; but it was finally rejected by the Imperial Defence Council in 1924.

Delay Helped Allied Cause

It was the English Channel which stopped the march of Hitler's victorious armies in 1940, and helped to save Britain from the fate which befell the greater part of Europe at that time. It provided an obstacle so formidable to the Germans that they could not seize the strategic advantage of an immediate invasion following the British disaster at Dunkirk. This delay proved of invaluable help to the Democratic cause, and without doubt helped considerably to change the course of the war at that time. It also put difficulties in the way of the Allied liberation of Europe, but the vast resources of the United Nations have at length been able to provide the means of making a successful channel crossing, and of pouring over it vast hordes of men and materials. This operation is undoubtedly the greatest military achievement of its kind which has ever been accomplished.

Invasions In Other Times

Military experts who planned the recent landings in Europe were not the first to attempt such an undertaking. Julius Caesar is said to have put ashore ten thousand men when he invaded Britain in 55 B.C. William, Duke of Normandy, landed an army in England in 1066, and in 1083 William of Orange brought a fleet of seven hundred transports across the Channel, carrying nearly sixteen thousand troops. Napoleon wanted to invade England in 1803, and had even ordered an elaborate plan. Lord Nelson, however, prevented him from ever carrying it out. During the First Great War, great quantities of men and materials were transported from Britain to France, but never before have operations been carried out in the Channel under conditions such as exist in this war. In dividing Britain from the continent of Europe, the English Channel has clearly had a great influence on the course of events since earliest times.

Not Just Drudgery

British Physiologist Gets New Slant On Art-Not Housekeeping

One of Britain's famed physiologists has discovered at the age of 77, that housewives have a place high among the artists of this world, that their work is not just drudgery but a thing of skill. The famed physiologist is Sir Leonard Hill. With his wife he lives in suburban London and now has reached the conclusion that scientists are deplorably ignorant about housekeeping.

It happened this way: He and his wife lost their gardener and maids and fended for themselves in their nine-roomed house. Sir Leonard worked out of the house and rest for his day, lasting from 6:30 a.m. to 12:30 a.m.

His conclusion at the end of six weeks' effort: "I have spent my whole life doing skilled acts. Only now have I discovered that housekeeping and housework consists of doing one skillful act after the other all day—and sometimes all evening as well."

SYNTHETIC RUBBER

Dr. Gustav Egloff, of Chicago, president of the American Institute of Chemists and director of research for a United States oil company, said that synthetic rubber "is here to stay and the post-war era will find the synthetic being employed in thousands of uses."

"Constipation gone—this easy way"

"I'm delighted I found out about ALL-BRAN, for it ended my constipation woes. It rid me of taking nasty harsh purgatives—which never helped more than a day or so. Now, thank goodness I'm an ALL-BRAN regular. I wouldn't miss eating this gentle-cleaning cereal for worlds."

you suffer from constipation due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, that you'll cheer for ALL-BRAN. It's so gentle and simple. All you do is eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN—yes as a cereal or in several muffins every day—and drink plenty of water. This famous cereal helps to produce smooth-working "bulk", and prepare wastes for easy elimination. And once you know ALL-BRAN's relief, you'll want to eat it every day to stay regular. Remember, it's a cereal—not a medicine. Get ALL-BRAN today, at your grocer. 2¢ per box. Made by Kellogg's in London, Can.

Price Control And Rationing Information

Q.—I am going away to a summer resort for two months, and, in view of the housing shortage in this district, I want to rent my home while I'm away. I have never rented before. I suppose there is just so much rent I am entitled to charge a tenant.

A.—Yes, there is. You should apply to the rentals office of the nearest Wartime Prices and Trade Board office in your province for a fixation of your rent. The rentals on summer cottages are also subject to the same rental restrictions as other properties and are, therefore, not to be rented at a higher rate than that charged for a corresponding period in 1941.

Q.—I saw a slack outfit displayed in a shop window the other day. The price wasn't shown in the window, but, when I went inside, I found there wasn't even a price tag on the garment. This seems to be poor protection for the buyer—why, the clerk could charge whatever he pleased desiring. I suppose, on a low price, you looked. Isn't there some ruling against this kind of selling practice?

A.—There is, yes. A Prices Board regulation became effective on June 1 to cover the placing of price tags by retailers on men's, women's and children's clothing and furnishings. This regulation also covers all types of footwear.

Q.—Now that we are well along in Ration Book 4, what's the use of keeping Ration Book 3? Couldn't we just tear out the sheet of "F" canning sugar coupons, and hand the book over to us?

A.—No, you could not. In the first place, handing any kind of loose ration coupons to grocers is illegal. But even after you use your canning sugar coupons, you should keep your old ration book. It contains ration coupons and other coupons that might be required later on.

Q.—I am going to a summer hotel for ten days this month. Will I have to take my ration book?

A.—No, summer hotels are not required to ration books for their guests unless they stay for a period of two weeks or more. For every two weeks the owner or manager must detach 1 sugar coupon, 1 tea-coffee coupon, 2 butter coupons and 1 preserves coupon from a guest's ration book.

Please send your questions or your request for the pamphlet "Consumers' News" or the Blue Book (the book in which you keep track of your selling prices) mentioning the name of this paper to the nearest Wartime Prices and Trade Board office in your province.

Has Imposing Name

But Londoners Prefer To Call British Prime Minister "Winnie"

What is Premier Churchill's real name? The question puzzles a good many people and very few know the answer.

The Prime Minister usually signs himself "Winston S. Churchill." But the Court Circular, a stickler for accuracy, always describes him as "The Right Honorable Winston Spencer-Churchill" because "Spencer-Churchill" is the name of the Marlborough family to which he belongs.

Actually, he has another name which he never uses—Leonard. So if you want to know how the United Kingdom Premier should be fully and formally described in legal documents the wording would be: "The Right Honorable Winston Leonard Spencer-Churchill." But Londoners prefer to call him "Winnie."—Ottawa Citizen.

Caring For Refugees

British And American Governments Establish Centre In Morocco

The British and American governments have established a refugee centre in a former U.S. Army camp near Fedala on the Moroccan coast to care for the homeless transferred from similar camps in Spain. The refugees were interned in Spain early in the war when they fled before the Nazi drives into Poland, France and the low countries. Only a handful have arrived so far, but arrangements have been completed for the transfer of 800 and the total may reach 2,000. The project has been placed under the United Nations Rehabilitation Administration for administrative purposes.

Receive Awards

Two Western Canadians Are Honored For Their Gallantry

D-day brought awards for gallantry to two members of the R.C.A.F., both hailing from western Canada. The Distinguished Flying Cross goes to F.O. Lorenza John Bateman, of Winnipeg, and the Distinguished Flying Medal goes to Sgt. Robert Alexander Edie, of Langham, Sask.

Bateman, who was born at Humboldt, and who was commissioned in 1942, is cited for, "invariably displaying a high degree of skill and courage in the course of attacks on the enemy." "Recently," the writ continues, "he executed a most determined attack on a U-boat. Despite intense opposing fire, the attack was pressed home with great skill, and resulted in the destruction of the vessel. This officer has completed many sorties and has set an excellent example of keenness and devotion to duty."

Sgt. Edie, 22-year-old rear gunner, earned the D.F.M. for an exploit in April, 1944, when the R.C.A.F. attacked the Friedrichshafen. "When nearing the target area the aircraft was attacked by two Junkers 88's. Coolly and skillfully, Sgt. Edie gave necessary evading directions to the pilot and then brought his guns to bear on the attackers, one of which was shot down and the other driven off. Some time later he drove off another fighter which attempted to close in. His good shooting coolness and co-operation played a worthy part in the success of the operation. This airman has completed many sorties against well defended targets."

Sgt. Edie is a farmer in civil life.

Making History

King George Meets Despondent Of Former Prime Minister

An ordinary seaman whom King George found casting an anchor during his recent inspection of the British home fleet turned out to be Erskine William Gladstone, a descendant of the Prime Minister in Queen Victoria's day. "My great grandfather used to see a lot of your great grandfather," said the King. "Meeting you here is history, and I wonder what they would think of it."

SMILE AWHILE

The Irish foreman found one of his men sleeping in the shade: "Sleep on, you lazy loot," he said, "sleep on. So long as you sleep, you've got a job; but when you wake up you're out of work."

A husband and wife came to a bank to open a joint account. Being in a hurry, the man made out his signature card and left.

"Let me see," an official of the bank said to the wife. "This is to be a joint account, is it not?" "That's right," smiled the wife. "Deposit for him—checking for me."

Freddie—Poor old Tom fell into a fortune last night.

Frankie—Why poor?

"He fell into it so hard that he went right through it."

Recruit—The sergeant is always picking holes in me.

Corporal—Well, you came here to be drilled, didn't you?

Doctor—Hurry, please. We have an emergency patient in the operating room who lost his balance, and—

Nurse—Maybe he has one in some other bank.

A preacher had a brother, a medical doctor, whom he very much resembled. A gentleman met the latter one day and said: "You preached a fine sermon on Sunday, Doctor," to which he replied:

"I am not the brother that preaches; I am the one that practices."

Mrs. Blaw—How did you ever get a reference saying you were a "strictly lady's man?"

Maids—I worked for a perfect lady, once.

The two girls were exchanging confidences over the luncheon table.

"What did the Sergeant say when you told him you'd be a sister to him?"

"Why the rascal had the nerve to ask me to lend him a dollar so he could take another girl to a movie."

Miss—One of these references you have given me says that you are slothful, untidy, careless and dishonest.

Cook—Is that all? . . . Nothing about my puff pastry?

Personality
Volunteer war services in three countries is the distinguished record of Pte. Williamina (correct) Dow of the C.W.A.C. Back in her native Scotland she did social service work among England's evacuated families before the blitz. In 1940 she came to the United States and lectured to American service clubs on post-war Britain. She was employed as secretary to a doctor in Denver, Colorado. Pte. Dow enlisted in the C.W.A.C. in Dec. 1943, and is at present attached to the Corps of Military Staff Clerks, Winnipeg, Man. She is the daughter of Mrs. Nesale Dow of Kinross, Scotland.

FASHION

Unusually knees are less of a problem to CWACs now that C.W.A.C. Beauty Parlours are a recognized Army establishment. The volunteer in charge of Miss Canada in khaki's hair-do, knows exactly what is required by C.W.A.C. authorities. She knows too that underneath the khaki serge boots a feminine heart, and she sets her styles accordingly. Some of the answers have been found in braids, rolls, or even up-sweeps. The feather bob has long been acclaimed as the "CWACs' Choice". Boyish bobs are discouraged as unfeminine and unnatural. The "halo roll" is very popular, being regimental yet glamorous and leaves the wearer feeling both feminine and at peace with Army regulations. As time goes by, women in khaki are learning the art of looking softly attractive while regimentally correct — it's a neat trick!

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

Luncheon At One-Thirty

By EDNA BLISS DRAKE

McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Even the prospect of luncheon for sixty failed to shake Selma's Swedish composure that hot summer morning. She took the usual time to bathe and dress before she descended to the kitchen. On the back porch she gathered up a row of milk and cream bottles. It would be difficult to find room for them in the already over-crowded refrigerator, but the day was humid and they must be kept cold at any price.

"Miss Summers is one fine woman," she thought as she plodded back and forth from porch to kitchen. "But I thank anybody's a fool to have parties in the country. I'd wait till winter back in town. No stores out here, always running short of butter; people lose road on way out; everybody late and always I bane on my feet in kitchen keeping things hot. Lucky we picked out the lobster last night!"

As she swung open the door of the large refrigerator she made a startling discovery. The butter was a soft mass and only water stood where ice cubes should have been. Evidently, during the hot, sultry night the electricity had been off for several hours!

Selma's broad face became absolutely expressionless. She pulled the larger pans of lobster from the shelves and scrutinized the pink and white delicacy closely in the early morning light. It looked all right and it smelled all right. Now that the current was on again should she add to Miss Summers' worries by telling her about the situation or should she keep the secret to herself? She debated the subject for a few minutes and finally decided to tell her employer. Something would have to be done about the butter anyway.

Bess Summers threw on a negligee and hurried to the kitchen. "What on earth are we going to do, Selma?" she cried. "There's no time to get more lobster. Do you suppose it's spoiled?"

"Now," replied Selma serenely. "I think I try it on Ben." Before Bess could stop her she fed a huge portion to the aged dog who lay under the table. He ate it and wagged his tail excitedly.

"Selma," cried Bess angrily. "What a cruel thing to do! Poor old Ben's one of the family!"

Selma shrugged. "Dogs don't eat poison. I thank they know more than people!"

"Are you sure?"

"Yes, ma'am! It won't hurt nobody. Ben knows!"

Bess recalled gruesome stories of people who had perished after feasting upon spoiled shellfish. On the table she held the freshly belled lobster had been placed in the ice box immediately after she and Selma had picked it out. Everything was functioning perfectly at midnight and the contents must have remained cool for several hours without the current.

She decided to risk it. "All right, Selma," she said briskly. "Don't say any more about it. Start the rolls and then we'll go ahead with the salad."

The thermometer climbed. Arriving guests exclaimed at the position of a hostess who had had the foresight to place the tables on the porch, under the trees and in the coolness of a spacious hall. Oscillating fans provided comfort throughout the house. There was a tinkle of ice in glasses and the quiet, luxurious estate seemed like an oasis to the thirsty, perspiring throng.

Luncheon was served. Never had Selma and the extra maids seemed so efficient. Bess congratulated herself on having engineered a perfect meal—flowers, foods, drinks and service. With a sigh of relief she organized the contract game.

When the last guest was seated she slipped into the kitchen for a word with Selma. "You did a grand job," she announced happily. "It's positively the best luncheon I ever gave!"

Selma was sitting serenely at the table drinking coffee. She poured herself a fresh cup, added cream and sugar and took a trial sip before she spoke.

"The dog's dead!" she announced calmly.

"Dead?" cried Bess wildly. "Dead! When did he die? Why didn't you tell me at once?"

"Oh, about an hour ago. Maybe a little longer. You thank so much of him I couldn't bear to tell you." She drained her cup with much gusto. "I do like my coffee," she stated as Bess dashed frantically to the telephone.

The next hour was a nightmare. Ambulances arrived. Doctors, nurses and internes appeared by the score. Bess, Selma and the maids aided the fast working doctors. By three o'clock all patients were resting comfortably and the medical profession drank tall glasses of lemonade.

A young interne followed Bess into the kitchen as she took out a tray of glasses. "You know I have to learn," he confided boyishly. "I've never seen a fatal case of ptomaine and I'm curious. May I see the dog?"

"Why, of course," Bess answered in a bewildered way. "Selma, show Dr. Jones poor old Ben. It may help him to save a life sometimes!"

Selma led the way to the back gate where lay the mangled body of a dog. "There he bane," she said sadly. "I thank they're hit and run drivers. They never stopped the car after they killed him!"

War Crimes Commission In Britain Is Keeping Tab

(By Helen Kirkpatrick)

The war crimes commission, which meets in London, is being kept busy these days as each Allied nation presents its reports. Here, for the sake of record, are a few French incidents:

Case 1.—In the town of Ribera, March 25. The Germans arrived, accompanied by Georgian soldiers from Gen. Andrei A. Vlassov's (renegade Russian) and by Spanish volunteers of the Blue brigade. They surrounded the town and at 11 o'clock made a house-to-house search.

About 100 persons were arrested and put in trucks. No one saw them again. Eight citizens were lined up and shot, including two garage mechanics, who were accused of letting the Maquisards (members of resistance groups living in the bush) take gasoline. The houses of all those arrested were looted and set afire. Before leaving, the Germans set the adjoining woods afire. In the woods were numerous French people collecting firewood.

Case 2.—Brantome, March 26. Twenty-six hostages were shot and their bodies left in a public square for 24 hours.

Case 3.—Department of Tarn-et-Garonne. A general clean-up of villages and the arrest of people suspected of feeding the Maquisards. The date, May 2.

Fifteen farms in the outskirts of Montpeut and six in the village itself were looted and burned. The village church was pillaged and its contents burned.

Case 4.—An department—later in May. The Germans, with the aid of Vichy militia, closed the Trappist monastery of Notre Dames des Donnes, about two monks and pillaged the monastery.

"Because of the slowness of the mails delivery of our patterns may take a few days longer than usual."

BRITISH WARSHIPS

The output of warships in Britain up to the end of January 1944 was only very slightly less than that of the last war, and the ships are of much greater complexity today. There is a tremendous increase in detail of equipment.

SOUND RECORDERS

New sound recorders which reproduce sound on half-inch steel wire are already in use on the war fronts. Weighing eight pounds, they contain over two miles of wire good for 66 minutes of sound and speech.

City Of Commerce

Interesting History Of Caen, Long Connected With English History

Caen, in peace-time one of the main tourist attractions in Normandy, is a city of commerce and industry supporting 61,000 persons, and lies on the Cherbourg-Paris railway, 150 miles west of Paris.

Raised to prominence in the days of William the Conqueror, Caen is the capital of the Department of Calvados, the seat of a Court of Appeal, a Court of Assizes, and of a Prefect. Graced by numerous churches, it has a university with faculties of law, science and letters, an academy, a preparatory school of medicine and pharmacy, and schools of art and music.

William the Conqueror founded the castle later completed by Henry I, and recently used by the French as a barracks.

In 1346 Caen was besieged and won by Edward III of England, and again in 1517 was captured by the English, who held it until 1563. The city suffered greatly in the religious wars in France.

Nine miles from the coast, Caen has a floating basin lined with quays and connected with the Orne river. A regular line of steamships carried on trade with Le Havre and New Haven, which is on the English south coast, and the city has a considerable fishing population.

Its diversified industries include lace-making, timber-sawing, metal-founding, machine construction, cloth-weaving and chemical products. Caen stone has been used extensively for buildings in both France and England.

Egyptian Mummies

A Burial Custom That Is Five Thousand Years Old

Guards at the Royal Ontario Museum report that nine out of ten people visiting the Museum want to see the Egyptian mummies. This exhibit holds more shivers than a combined ghost story and mystery thriller. Its real importance lies in the fact that it illustrates a burial custom five thousand years old, one unique in the history of mankind. Mummification, an attempt to perpetuate physical life by complicated embalming and ritual, gradually developed in complexity from about 3,000 B.C. to its highest point of elaboration about 1,000 B.C. The burial of objects to be used in the mummy's physical life after death naturally developed as a consequence.

Practically all of our knowledge of ancient Egyptian daily life comes from the tombs. That this daily life is far more interesting than the mummies themselves can easily be proved by a few hours in the Egyptian galleries. Here the life of the past can be reconstructed from the Museum's collection of jewellery, toilet articles, tools, weapons, furniture, sculpture, stone and decorated clay vases, etc.

Boys Had Their Fun

But Gestapo In Oslo Probably Did Not Appreciate Joke

From Norway came this tale of how some boys, unconvinced to Hitler's "new order," amused themselves one day:

They placed a bundle of underground newspapers in an Oslo office building lobby; then notified Gestapo plainclothesmen that the papers were to be picked up by patriots. Next they called a Nazi-controlled police station, reported about the papers and suggested that plainclothesmen be sent to retrieve them in order to avoid attracting undue attention.

The ensuing fight between the waiting Gestapo men and the city police was everything that the boys had hoped.

Coal In Arctic Circle

Russians Have Brought New Coal Fields Into Production

Field readers were given a glimpse of the new coal fields north of the Arctic circle, which have been brought into production during the days of the war.

The construction of a railroad from Kozhva to the Pechora river north-west to Vorkuta has made possible the exploitation of this new source of supplies, which already has been called the Arctic Donbas. Six additional mines are scheduled to begin production this year, according to an account in Pravda.

Coal from the new fields is going largely to Leningrad, the account indicates. The miners have agreed to send all production exceeding the scheduled programme as a gift to the city.

Secret Weapons

British Scientists Have Found Answer To The Glider Bomb

One of the German secret weapons that looked menacing a short time ago was the glider bomb. In fact it sank the brand-new Italian battleship "Roma" after the Italian capitulation. It has now been announced that British scientists found the answer to this threat. The nature of the new counter-device is, naturally enough, still secret.

SELECTED RECIPES

Nutrition-wise homemakers serve fish regularly. They realize its importance as a dietary constituent. Fish, regardless of type, is high in food value. It is rich in vitamins and minerals, and it is one of the best sources of iodine.

A seafood meal is especially valuable now when it comes to saving ration coupons and money. Fortunately, there are fish for every season of the year, and they can be prepared in a variety of ways. For those who claim they don't like fish, a casserole dish calling for cracker crumbs might be just the thing to inspire a change of sentiment. The salty flavor adds zest to fish dishes and makes it tempting even to the countless inland dwellers who are just learning to appreciate seafood.

SCANDINAVIAN FISH PUDDING

2½ cups cold cooked fish
1 cup cracker crumbs
1½ cups scalded milk
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
Few drops onion juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika

2 eggs
Flake the fish and put it through a food chopper three times. It should be mashed very fine. In the meantime, soak the crumbs into the scalded milk. Then, add the butter, onion juice, the lemon juice, salt and paprika. Separate the eggs. Beat the whites stiff and the yolks until creamy. Stir the yolks into the first mixture. Add the fish and fold in the egg whites. Turn into a well-buttered bowl or mould. Cover closely and steam an hour-and-a-half, or set in a pan of hot water and bake an hour in a slow oven. Serve with peas, string beans or carrots and peas.

During the late glacial period 15,000 to 25,000 years ago, Alaska was without ice, although glaciers covered most of North America.

CANNOT USE IT

In the first flush of their assault the Japs secured control of the world's main natural rubber producing areas in Malaya and the Dutch East Indies. But apparently a shortage of shipping has curtailed the usefulness of this supply for Tokyo now announces the opening of a synthetic rubber plant.

MAKE THAT DARN INVISIBLE

When the hole is large avoid stretching or puckering. Tack a piece of net or veiling over the hole and use it as a foundation for darning. This also strengthens the darn.

1. Begin darning ½ inch beyond the hole and make the first row equal to the length of the hole.
 2. Increase the length of the rows at each end until the actual hole is reached; then keep straight across the hole and decrease at the side.
 3. When darning over the hole, take the new thread through all the loops to prevent ladders.
 4. For cross darning begin ¼ inch above the hole and darn lattice fashion over and under darning threads.
- Use this method for woollen stockings, sweaters and knitted articles. Thin places may be darned to strengthen. Darning should sew only on the wrong side except for tiny stitches.

INVITING YOUR PATRONAGE

When harvesting starts this season considerable space will be available for deliveries of grain in country elevators. Many customers of Alberta Pool Elevators have been prevented from delivering to these elevators in the past few years due to congestion of facilities. This fall they will likely have the opportunity of again becoming patrons of this farmers grain organization.

Inflation and Deflation... Evil Companions

Past wars have always brought some degree of inflation.

Goods were scarce... Prices and wages sky rocketed to unnatural heights.

Then one day the war stopped . . .

in due time goods became plentiful again.

Scarcity prices could no longer be demanded and "spiralling" prices went "pop" and came down with a bang.

people stopped buying because they thought prices would go still lower merchandise dropped in value—retailers went bankrupt factories closed and unemployment followed farms were foreclosed distress was general and deflation was in the saddle.

PREVENTION OF INFLATION IS THE BEST PROTECTION AGAINST DEFLATION

LISTEN TO "IN THE SPOTLIGHT" RADIO PROGRAMME EVERY SUNDAY NIGHT 7:30 p.m., B. C. T.

This advertisement is one of a series being issued by the Government of Canada to emphasize the importance of preventing further increases in the cost of living now and deflation later.

Price ceilings—wage and salary controls—rationing—Victory Bonds—increased taxation—are all part of a grand strategy to head off inflation—thus preventing deflation.
